Una gota de cine español en el océano de EE UU

Recent Cinema From Spain de Miami busca difundir las películas españolas en el país. El festival arranca hoy con 'Rumbo' y proyectará 'El olivo' o 'El pregón', entre otras

T.K.

Madrid - 17 NOV 2016 - 15:32 CET

Asistentes a una proyección del Recent Cinema From Spain de Miami en 2015.

2015, según el Observatorio Audiovisual Europeo, un porcentaje que ya querría para sí cualquier industria europea. De ahí que apenas haya espacio para todas las demás cinematografías del mundo, que luchan por el otro 10% del pastel. En esa compleja batalla se vuelca desde hace seis años el Festival de Cine Español de Miami (Recent Cinema From Spain), que arranca hoy con un programa de cuatro días, seis filmes, con sus respectivos coloquios, y la aspiración a un rol cada vez más importante en la ciudad y el país.
